INT. ARCHIVE BASEMENT - NIGHT

Steel shelving to the ceiling. A single bulb, swinging.

EXT. LOADING DOCK - CONTINUOUS

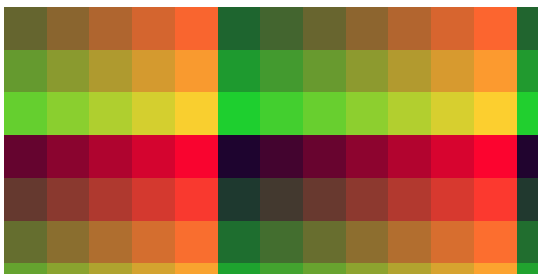
Rain on corrugated tin, loud enough to argue over.

INT./EXT. DELIVERY VAN - MOVING - LATER

The wipers lose.

42 INT. ARCHIVE BASEMENT - RESHELVING - DAY 42

A dual-margin scene number, the shooting-script shape: the same number printed at both margins.



INT. READING ROOM - DAY

ODILE sets down a box that is heavier than it looks.

INDEX CARDS

Handwriting from four decades, none of it consistent.

LEDGER, LATER

One column, ruled in pencil, never once balanced.

CUT TO:

INT. STAIRWELL - CONTINUOUS

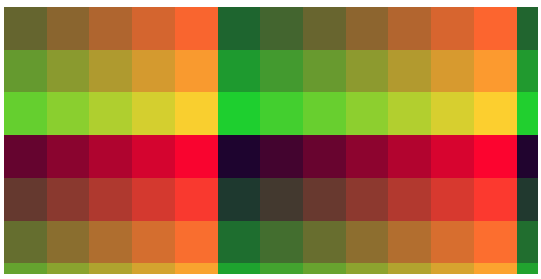
Footsteps going down two at a time.

DISSOLVE TO:

EXT. ARCHIVE - NIGHT

The building keeps its lights on for nobody.

SMASH CUT TO:



INT. ARCHIVE BASEMENT - NIGHT

Nobody is where their voice says they are.

BUNNY
(O.S.)
The period-full spelling, the one the manuals print.

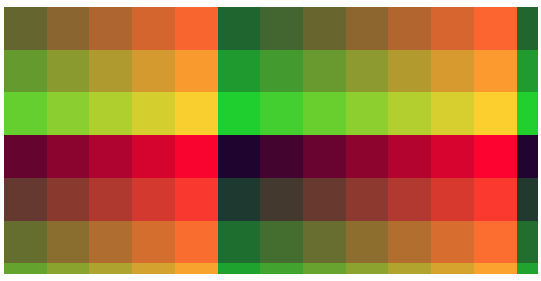
CASSIUS
(V.O)
And the one writers actually type, missing its period.

ODILE
(O.C)
Off camera, also missing its period.

WREN (CONT’D)
A continued cue, carrying its extension.

DR. E. T. MARCHETTI
Dotted abbreviations sitting inside a character name.

BUNNY (V.O.)
A hybrid: name and extension on one cue line.



INT. READING ROOM - DAY

The box is open now. It was not worth the trip.

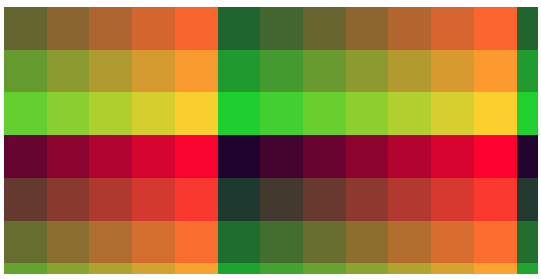
BUNNY
(quietly)
A leading parenthetical, before a word is spoken.

CASSIUS
A line, and then a beat in the middle of it.

(reconsidering)
And then the rest of it, after the beat.

ODILE
(standing)
(then, to WREN)
Two stacked parentheticals before any dialogue at all.

WREN
Short.



INT. ARCHIVE BASEMENT - NIGHT

They have been at this for six hours.

WREN
No.

BUNNY
Yes.

WREN
No.

ODILE
MORE-ANCHOR. This speech begins near the foot of the page on purpose, so that it runs over the break and has to be put back together on the other side. It keeps going well past the boundary so the rejoin has something substantial to work with, and so that the same speech doubles as the long-dialogue case the coverage table asks for, rather than spending two constructions on what is really one shape.

INT. CONSERVATION BENCH - DAY

The label reads DO NOT LAMINATE, twice.

She says it again, and this time somebody writes it down.

The stamp is both bold and italic at once.

A styled run that crosses the wrap boundary because it keeps going for long enough to need a second line, and then stops.

Punctuation only, styled by itself.

This word is underlined with drawn vector art.

This phrase is ~~struck through~~, above the baseline.

A table rules a border below this cell, further down.

A page-wide rule crosses this whole line of text.

---

CHYRON: EVERY NAME HERE IS INVENTED.

A footnote, set smaller than the body.

The index card, enlarged for the reader.

A SIGN, VERY LARGE INDEED

WREN
A text message, in the phone's own face.

CASSIUS
Dialogue can be bold too.

ODILE
And italic, which is the common one.

INT. READING ROOM - DAY

They speak over each other.

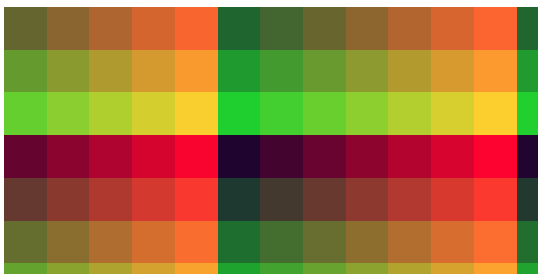
LEFTMARK. Short, on the left.

CASSIUS
RIGHTMARK. Short, on the right.

And again, at length.

ODILE
This column runs long enough that the taller of the two passes twelve estimated rendered lines, which is the threshold where the side-by-side table gives up and both speeches become ordinary sequential dialogue instead.

WREN
And this one answers at similar length so neither column is trivially short, because the fallback measures the taller of the pair and a stub would never reach it.



BUNNY
Speech one. Short.

CASSIUS
Speech two. If this line sits alone at the top or the bottom of a page, the keep failed.
